'Freeze!' – Marker Drawing on Clear Acrylic Workshop

In this out-of-the-box workshop, participants will have the first-hand opportunity to experience SB2011 artist Gosia Wlodarczak's dynamic drawing approach on a smaller scale. By holding up an acrylic piece to frame a particular area, participants will draw interpretatively what they see and experience in front of them. An "in-the-moment" drawing process in itself, participants are encouraged to think creatively based on how they perceive their environment, and to share their "views" with their classmates at the end of the workshop.

'My City' – Marker Drawing Workshop

This sketch-based workshop draws parallels with how participants envision their future architectural environment to be, while aligning with Michael Lee's exhibit of creating a fictitious environment of an architect. Based on the discovery of lines and forms from the artist's work, as well as their personal aspirations and pre-conceived ideas of architecture they know, participants will design and compose a building or cityscape on paper. In doing so, they will also gain a basic understanding of scale and perspective drawing.

'Tag! Tag!' – Stuffed Label Craft Workshop

To embrace the Old Kallang Airport's history as Singapore's first civil airport, this workshop will identify the significance of transportation by connecting participants with the site, through the process of designing and personalizing their own luggage tag. Participants will take a tour of the inspiring Self-Project, Our Landscape project, which was conceptualized by the Artistic Director of Singapore Biennale 2011, Matthew Ngui, and identify what would be a good representation of themselves if they were to replace their names on the tag with drawings instead. By exposing participants to a multitude of representational self-portraits, their respective personal experiences of the installation will translate into a variety of outcomes shaped by individual emotions and sensory awareness.
